FOR THE ASSOCIATE COMMISSIONER,
EXAMINATIONS

Helen E. Crawford for

Robert P. Wiemann, Director
Administrative Appeals Office

DISCUSSION: The preference visa petition was denied by the Director, California Service Center, and is now before the Associate Commissioner for Examinations on appeal. The appeal will be dismissed.

The petitioner is a sign manufacturer. It seeks to employ the beneficiary permanently in the United States as a sign maker. As required by statute, the petition is accompanied by an individual labor certification approved by the Department of Labor. The director determined that the petitioner had not established that it had the financial ability to pay the beneficiary the proffered wage as of the priority date of the visa petition.

On appeal, counsel submits a brief and additional evidence.

Section 203(b)(3)(A)(i) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (the Act), 8 U.S.C. 1153(b)(3)(A)(i), provides for the granting of preference classification to qualified immigrants who are capable, at the time of petitioning for classification under this paragraph, of performing skilled labor (requiring at least two years training or experience), not of a temporary or seasonal nature, for which qualified workers are not available in the United States.

8 C.F.R. 204.5(g)(2) states in pertinent part:

> Ability of prospective employer to pay wage. Any petition filed by or for an employment-based immigrant which requires an offer of employment must be accompanied by evidence that the prospective United States employer has the ability to pay the proffered wage. The petitioner must demonstrate this ability at the time the priority date is established and continuing until the beneficiary obtains lawful permanent residence. Evidence of this ability shall be either in the form of copies of annual reports, federal tax returns, or audited financial statements.

Eligibility in this matter hinges on the petitioner's ability to pay the wage offered as of the petition's priority date, which is the date the request for labor certification was accepted for processing by any office within the employment system of the Department of Labor. Matter of Wing's Tea House, 16 I&N Dec. 158 (Act. Reg. Comm. 1977). Here, the petition's priority date is January 14, 1998. The beneficiary's salary as stated on the labor certification is $13.70 per hour or $28,496.00 per annum.

Counsel initially submitted a copy of the petitioner's 1998 Form 1120 U.S. Corporation Income Tax Return which reflected gross receipts of $330,399; gross profit of $182,367; compensation of officers of $5,734; salaries and wages paid of $43,706; and a taxable income before net operating loss deduction and special deductions of -$45,935.

On February 4, 2002, the director requested additional evidence to establish that the petitioner had the ability to pay the proffered wage.

In response, counsel submitted copies of the petitioner's 1999 and 2000 Form 1120 U.S. Corporation Income Tax Return. The tax return for 1999 reflected gross receipts of $435,299; gross profit of $258,990; compensation of officers of $47,600; salaries and wages paid of $62,752; and a taxable income before net operating loss deduction and special deductions of -$53,629. The tax return for 2000 reflected gross receipts of $422,615; gross profit of $290,372; compensation of officers of $24,000; salaries and wages paid of $105,864; and a taxable income before net operating loss deduction and special deductions of $23,164.

The director determined that the evidence submitted did not establish that the petitioner had the ability to pay the proffered wage and denied the petition accordingly.

On appeal, counsel re-submits the petitioner's tax returns for 1998, 1999, and 2000 and argues that "[e]ven with taxable income, as cited by the INS, at or below $0, Petitioner has shown over time the ability to increase and to sustain an increase in, its payroll. As such, Petitioner contends that it has met the requirement of showing the ability to pay the proffered wage in this matter.

The petitioner's Form 1120 for calendar year 1998 shows a taxable income of -$45,935. The petitioner could not pay a proffered wage of $28,496.00 a year out of this income.

Additionally, the tax returns for 1999 and 2000 continue to show an inability to pay the wage offered.

Accordingly, after a review of the federal tax returns submitted, it is concluded that the petitioner has not established that it had sufficient available funds to pay the salary offered as of the priority date of filing of the petition.

The burden of proof in these proceedings rests solely with the petitioner. Section 291 of the Act, 8 U.S.C. 1361. The petitioner has not met that burden.

ORDER: The appeal is dismissed.
