FOR THE ASSOCIATE COMMISSIONER, EXAMINATIONS

Mary C. Mulrean, Acting Director
Administrative Appeals Office

DISCUSSION: The visa petition to classify the beneficiary as an immediate relative was denied by the District Director, New York, New York. A subsequent appeal was dismissed by the Associate Commissioner for Examinations. The matter is now before the Associate Commissioner for Examinations on motion to reopen and reconsider. The motion will be granted. The previous decision of the Associate Commissioner for Examinations will be affirmed.

The Petition to Classify Orphan as an Immediate Relative (Form I-600) was properly filed on April 1, 1998. The petitioner is a [REDACTED] year-old unmarried citizen of the United States. The beneficiary, who at this time is [REDACTED] years old, was born in [REDACTED] on [REDACTED]. The beneficiary's biological father, [REDACTED] and biological mother, [REDACTED] are still living. The district director denied the petition after determining that the beneficiary does not meet the statutory definition of "orphan" because the beneficiary's parents had given their consent to the adoption and therefore, have not abandoned her.

On appeal, counsel argued that the district director had incorrectly concluded "that since the beneficiary's natural parents consented to the adoption, the child does not qualify as an orphan." Counsel also argued that the beneficiary is a child whose sole parent, the biological mother, was incapable of providing proper support and irrevocably released the beneficiary for adoption. Counsel submitted additional evidence for consideration.

The Associate Commissioner for Examinations dismissed the appeal, reasoning that the petitioner had submitted insufficient evidence to establish that the beneficiary was abandoned by her parents and had not established that the beneficiary has a sole parent. Beyond the director's decision, the Associate Commissioner noted that the adoption within [REDACTED] was a proxy adoption and therefore not valid for immigration purposes, that there was no evidence of the petitioner's U.S. citizenship, and that the record did not contain evidence of compliance with state preadoption requirements or a current homestudy.

On motion, counsel argues that the petitioner never claimed that the beneficiary was abandoned by her natural parents. Instead, counsel argues, the beneficiary is a child whose sole parent, the mother, was incapable of providing proper care and irrevocably released the child for adoption. The petitioner also provides a copy of her naturalization certificate and her passport.

Section 101(b) (1) (F) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (the Act), 8 U.S.C. 1101(b) (12) (F), defines orphan in pertinent part as:

a child, under the age of sixteen at the time a petition is filed in his behalf to accord a classification as an immediate relative under section 201(b), who is an orphan because of the death or disappearance of, abandonment or desertion by, or separation or loss from, both parents, or for whom the sole or surviving parent is incapable of providing the proper care and has in writing irrevocably released the child for emigration and adoption...

Counsel asserts that the district director erroneously found that the child does not qualify as an orphan because the parents consented to the adoption.

The regulation at 8 C.F.R. 204.3(b) states:

Abandonment by both parents means that the parents have willfully forsaken all parental rights, obligations, and claims to the child, as well as all control over and possession of the child, without intending to transfer, or without transferring, these rights to any specific person(s). Abandonment must include not only the intention to surrender all parental rights, obligations and claims to the child, and control over and possession of the child, but also the actual act of surrendering such rights, obligations, claims, control and possession. A relinquishment or release by the parents to the prospective adoptive parents or for a specific adoption does not constitute abandonment. Similarly, the relinquishment or release of the child by the parents to a third party for custodial care in anticipation of, or preparation for adoption does not constitute abandonment unless the third party (such as a governmental agency, a court of competent jurisdiction, an adoption agency, or an orphanage) is authorized under the child welfare laws of the foreign-sending country to act in such a capacity. A child who is placed temporarily in an orphanage shall not be considered to be abandoned if the parents express an intention to retrieve the child, are contributing or attempting to contribute to the support of the child, or otherwise exhibit ongoing parental interest in the child. A child who has been given unconditionally to an orphanage shall be considered to be abandoned.

The petitioner submitted an extract from the minutes of the Clerk of the Court of the Peace of [REDACTED] dated [REDACTED]. According to this extract, the beneficiary's biological mother and biological father provided their consent to the adoption of the beneficiary by the petitioner. The above regulations state that a relinquishment or release by the parents to the prospective adoptive parents or for a specific adoption does not constitute abandonment.

Counsel argues on motion that the petitioner never claimed that the beneficiary was abandoned by her natural parents. It should be noted that the Associate Commissioner addressed this issue on appeal because the district director found that the beneficiary is not the child of a sole and surviving parent, and that the beneficiary had not been abandoned because she had been relinquished by her parents to the prospective adoptive parents for a specific adoption. The Associate Commissioner properly concluded that the petitioner had submitted insufficient evidence to establish that the beneficiary was abandoned by her parents within the meaning of 8 C.F.R. 204.3(b). The petitioner has submitted nothing on appeal that overcomes this finding. For this reason, the petition may not be approved.

When addressing the petitioner's claim that the beneficiary is the child of a sole and surviving parent, the Associate Commissioner noted that the beneficiary's biological parents gave statements in support of the issuance of a [REDACTED] adoption decree indicating that they voluntarily consented to the adoption of the beneficiary by [REDACTED]

Counsel argued on appeal, and argues again on motion, that the beneficiary is a child whose sole parent, the biological mother, was incapable of providing proper care and irrevocably released the child for adoption.

8 C.F.R. 204.3(b) further states that:

Sole parent means the mother when it is established that the child is illegitimate and has not acquired a parent within the meaning of section 101(b)(2) of the Act. An illegitimate child shall be considered to have a sole parent if his or her father has severed all parental ties, rights, duties, and obligations to the child, or if his or her father has, in writing, irrevocably released the child for emigration and adoption. This definition is not applicable to children born in countries which make no distinction between a child born in or out of wedlock, since all such children are considered to be legitimate.

The Presidential Decree of January 27, 1959, abolished all legal distinctions for [REDACTED] children whether born in or out of wedlock except for the offspring of adulterous or incestuous relations. In Matter of Richard, 18 I&N Dec. 208 (BIA 1982), the Board recognized the effect of the decree and held that persons born out of wedlock in [REDACTED] subsequent to January 27, 1959, and acknowledged by their natural father are deemed legitimate children under section 101(b)(1)(A) of the Act. See Matter of Cherismo, 19 I&N Dec. 25 (BIA 1984).

According to the beneficiary's birth certificate, on [REDACTED] [REDACTED] the beneficiary's biological father appeared before an officer of Civil Status of [REDACTED] South Section, and declared himself to be the biological father of the beneficiary. Further, as noted above, on [REDACTED], the biological father appeared before the Clerk of the Court of the Peace of [REDACTED] declared himself to be the father of the beneficiary, and gave his consent to the beneficiary's adoption.

The Associate Commissioner stated that counsel argued on appeal that the biological father's consent to the adoption constitutes his abandonment of the child and renders the biological mother the sole parent. On motion, counsel denies having made this specific argument, claiming that "this statement confused the issue of abandonment." It is noted that counsel had argued on appeal that the father irrevocably released the child by consenting to the adoption, and is "not to be considered as a parent of the child." Accordingly, counsel argues, the child is to be regarded as having a sole parent: the mother.

On motion, counsel notes that in 1995 Congress amended the definition of a "child" within section 101(b) of the Immigration and Nationality Act to reference children born "in wedlock" and "out of wedlock" rather than children who are "legitimate" or "illegitimate." Counsel argues that the Service's regulatory definition of a sole parent is void because it still refers to "legitimate" and "illegitimate" children and is therefore inconsistent with the Act. However, the record still does not establish that the beneficiary is the child of a sole parent.

The record does not demonstrate that the father has severed all parental ties, rights, duties and obligations to the beneficiary. As stated above, the beneficiary's birth certificate states that her father presented himself to a civil service officer in [REDACTED] on [REDACTED] and declared himself to be the beneficiary's father. The father similarly asserted his rights as father of the beneficiary when he agreed to her adoption.

Further, the record does not establish that the father released the beneficiary for adoption and emigration such that the beneficiary's mother could be considered a sole parent. The beneficiary's father released the beneficiary for adoption at the same time that the beneficiary's mother agreed to the adoption. Since the beneficiary's parents simultaneously consented to "renounce this child and accept...the said adoption," the mother has never been the sole parent in custody of the child.

In this case, the petitioner has not shown that the beneficiary is illegitimate. The beneficiary's biological father has been identified in the record and has acknowledged the beneficiary to be his daughter. The record does not establish that the biological father had disappeared, abandoned or deserted the child. Accordingly, the petitioner has not established that the beneficiary has a sole parent.

Beyond the decision of the district director, the Associate Commissioner found that the adoption decree shows that it was a proxy adoption where the petitioner was represented by her attorney, [REDACTED] for the adoption of the beneficiary, [REDACTED]

The aforementioned regulation states specifically that if the married petitioner and spouse or the unmarried petitioner did not personally see and observe the child prior to or during the adoption proceedings abroad, the petitioner must submit a statement by an official of the state in which the child will reside that readoption is permissible in that state, in addition to evidence of compliance with the preadoption requirements, if any, of that state.

On motion, the petitioner submits a copy of her passport showing entries into [REDACTED] in April of [REDACTED] and January of [REDACTED], and a personal statement in which she claims that she visited the beneficiary in [REDACTED] and [REDACTED] prior to the adoption proceedings. Accordingly, the petitioner has submitted sufficient evidence to establish that she personally saw and observed the child prior to the adoption proceedings abroad, and has overcome this portion of the Associate Commissioner's decision.

Finally, the record does not contain a current homestudy. On motion counsel notes that the Associate Commissioner had found the homestudy was not contained in the record, but does not submit a current homestudy. As the appeal will be dismissed on the grounds discussed, this issue need not be examined further.

Motions for the reopening of immigration proceedings are disfavored for the same reasons as are petitions for rehearing and motions for a new trial on the basis of newly discovered evidence. INS v. Doherty, supra at 323 (citing INS v. Abudu, 485 U.S. at 107-108). A party seeking to reopen a proceeding bears a "heavy burden." INS v. Abudu, supra at 110.

The burden of proof is on the petitioner to establish the beneficiary's eligibility for classification as an orphan. Matter of Annang, 14 I&N Dec. 502 (BIA 1973); Matter of Brantigan, 11 I&N 493 (BIA 1966); Matter of Yee, 11 I&N Dec. 27 (BIA 1964); Section 291 of the Act, 8 U.S.C. 1361. The petitioner has not sustained that burden. Accordingly, the decision of the district director will not be disturbed.

ORDER: The decision of the Associate Commissioner dated May 17, 2000, is affirmed.
