Robert P. Wiemann, Director
Administrative Appeals Office

DISCUSSION: The preference visa petition was denied by the Director, California Service Center, and is now before the Administrative Appeals Office (AAO) on appeal. The appeal will be sustained and the petition will be approved.

The petitioner is a corporation that specializes in the manufacture of robotics, automation systems, special machinery, tools, and fixtures. It seeks to employ the beneficiary permanently in the United States as a manufacturing engineer. As required by statute, the petition is accompanied by an individual labor certification approved by the Department of Labor. The director determined that the petitioner had not established that it had the financial ability to pay the beneficiary the proffered wage as of the priority date of the visa petition.

On appeal, counsel submits a statement and additional evidence.

Section 203(b)(3)(A)(ii) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (the Act), 8 U.S.C. § 1153(b)(3)(A)(ii), provides for the granting of preference classification to qualified immigrants who, at the time of petitioning for classification under this paragraph, hold baccalaureate degrees and who are members of the professions.

The regulation at 8 C.F.R. § 204.5(g)(2) states in pertinent part:

Ability of prospective employer to pay wage. Any petition filed by or for an employment-based immigrant which requires an offer of employment must be accompanied by evidence that the prospective United States employer has the ability to pay the proffered wage. The petitioner must demonstrate this ability at the time the priority date is established and continuing until the beneficiary obtains lawful permanent residence. Evidence of this ability shall be either in the form of copies of annual reports, federal tax returns, or audited financial statements.

Eligibility in this matter hinges on the petitioner's ability to pay the wage offered as of the petition's priority date, which is the date the request for labor certification was accepted for processing by any office within the employment system of the Department of Labor. Matter of Wing's Tea House, 16 I&N Dec. 158 (Act. Reg. Comm. 1977). Here, the petition's priority date is September 14, 2000. The beneficiary's salary as stated on the labor certification is $36,537.00 per annum.

On March 20, 2001, the director issued a request for additional evidence of the petitioner's ability to pay the proffered wage. The director specifically requested copies of the petitioner's latest annual report, tax returns, or audited financial statements. In response, the petitioner submitted compiled financial statements for the years 2000 and 2001 that had not been audited by a certified public accountant.

The director determined that the evidence submitted did not meet the requirements set by 8 C.F.R. § 204.5(g)(2) and did not establish that the petitioner had the ability to pay the proffered wage. Accordingly, the director properly denied the petition.

On appeal, counsel concedes that the petitioner submitted unaudited financial statements, but asserts that the Service should take into consideration the fact that the petitioner had been paying the beneficiary the proffered wage of $36,537 as of September 14, 2000, the date that the labor certification application was filed. In support of this claim, the petitioner submitted a copy of the beneficiary's Internal Revenue Service (IRS) Form W-2 for the year 2000 as well as copies of the beneficiary's pay stubs. The Form W-2 and the pay stubs reflect that the beneficiary had been hired by the petitioner on April 16, 2000 and paid an annual salary equivalent to $36,537 during that year.

In determining the petitioner's ability to pay the proffered wage, the Service will examine whether the petitioner employed the beneficiary at the time the priority date was established. If the petitioner establishes by credible documentary evidence that it employed the beneficiary at a salary equal to or greater than the proffered wage, this evidence will be considered prima facie proof of the petitioner's ability to pay the beneficiary's salary. Such evidence should include credible payroll documentation that directly relates to the employment of the beneficiary in the year of filing, including payroll records, the beneficiary's individual federal tax return, IRS Form W-2s, and IRS Form 1099s. In the present matter, the petitioner has established by credible evidence that it has previously employed the beneficiary at the proffered salary at the time that the priority date was established.

Accordingly, after a review of the evidence submitted, it is concluded that the petitioner has established that it had the ability to pay the salary offered as of the priority date of the petition.

The burden of proof in these proceedings rests solely with the petitioner. Section 291 of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1361. The petitioner has met that burden.

ORDER: The appeal is sustained.
