Robert P. Wiemann, Director
Administrative Appeals Office

DISCUSSION: The immigrant visa petition was denied by the Director, Vermont Service Center, and is now before the Administrative Appeals Office (AAO) on appeal. The appeal will be dismissed.

The petitioner is a monastery, seeking classification of the beneficiary as a special immigrant religious worker pursuant to section 203(b)(4) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (the Act), 8 U.S.C. § 1153(b)(4), in order to employ her as an "extern" at a weekly salary of $310.

The director denied the petition, finding that the petitioner failed to establish that the offered position qualified as that of a religious worker.

On appeal, counsel for the petitioner submits a brief in support of the appeal, asserting that the proffered position qualifies as a religious occupation.

Section 203(b)(4) of the Act provides classification to qualified special immigrant religious workers as described in section 101(a)(27)(C) of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1101(a)(27)(C), which pertains to an immigrant who:

(i) for at least 2 years immediately preceding the time of application for admission, has been a member of a religious denomination having a bona fide nonprofit, religious organization in the United States;

(ii) seeks to enter the United States--

(I) solely for the purpose of carrying on the vocation of a minister of that religious denomination,

(II) before October 1, 2003, in order to work for the organization at the request of the organization in a professional capacity in a religious vocation or occupation, or

(III) before October 1, 2003, in order to work for the organization (or for a bona fide organization which is affiliated with the religious denomination and is exempt from taxation as an organization described in section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Code of 1986) at the request of the organization in a religious vocation or occupation; and

(iii) has been carrying on such vocation, professional work, or other work continuously for at least the 2-year period described in clause (i).

The beneficiary is a native and citizen of Trinidad. According to the evidence on the record, the beneficiary entered the United States as a B-2 nonimmigrant visitor for pleasure on January 13, 1985.

The sole issue to be addressed in this proceeding is whether the proffered position qualifies as a religious occupation.

A petitioner must establish that the proposed position qualifies as a religious occupation for the purpose of special immigrant classification.

8 C.F.R. 204.5(m)(2) states, in pertinent part, that:

Religious occupation means an activity which relates to a traditional religious function. Examples of individuals in religious occupations include, but are not limited to, liturgical workers, religious instructors, religious counselors, cantors, catechists, workers in religious hospitals or religious health care facilities, missionaries, religious translators, or religious broadcasters. This group does not include janitors, maintenance workers, clerks, fund raisers, or persons solely involved in the solicitation of donations.

To establish eligibility for special immigrant classification, the petitioner must establish that the specific position that it is offering qualifies as a religious occupation as defined in the regulations. The statute is silent on what constitutes a "religious occupation" and the regulation states only that it is an activity relating to a traditional religious function. The regulation does not define the term "traditional religious function" and instead provides a brief list of examples. The list reveals that not all employees of a religious organization are considered to be engaged in a religious occupation for the purpose of special immigrant classification. The regulation states that positions such as cantor, missionary, or religious instructor are examples of qualifying religious occupations. Persons in such positions must complete prescribed courses of training established by the governing body of the denomination and their services are directly related to the creed and practice of the religion. The regulation reflects that non-qualifying positions are those whose duties are primarily administrative or secular in nature. Persons in such positions must be qualified in their occupation, but they require no specific religious training or theological education.

The Bureau therefore interprets the term "traditional religious function" to require a demonstration that the duties of the position are directly related to the religious creed of the denomination, that the position is defined and recognized by the governing body of the denomination, and that the position is traditionally a permanent, full-time, salaried occupation within the denomination.

In this case, the petitioner has not established that the position of extern is a traditional permanent salaried position for lay persons.

The petitioner described the beneficiary's job duties as follows:

1. Greeting visitors and extending hospitality in the outside quarters and guest and retreat rooms.
2. Receiving altar bread orders by phone and transmitting them to the cloistered nuns in the altar bread department. Relaying phone requests for prayers to the cloistered nuns.
3. Accompanying the cloistered nuns to doctor appointments, visiting infirm nuns in nursing homes or hospitals and chopping for the needs of the community.
4. Caring for nuns in the infirmary by assisting in bathing, personal hygiene, administering medication and providing general assistance when needed.
5. Interacting with our cloistered nuns by making it possible for them to be present for Eucharist adoration, sacred study and prayer.

A review of these duties established that the tasks associated with the position are secular rather than religious in nature. Such duties are specifically excluded from the duties of a qualifying religious occupation pursuant to the above regulation. Therefore, the proposed position is not qualifying as a religious occupation for the purpose of special immigrant classification.

In review, the petitioner has failed to overcome the director's objection to approving the petition.

The burden of proof in these proceedings rests solely with the petitioner. Section 291 of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1361. Here, the petitioner has not sustained that burden.

ORDER: The appeal is dismissed.
